Cold Light Frank Moorhouse

Cold Light by Frank Moorhouse is third in his 'Edith' trilogy comprising Grand Days and Dark Palace. I read these years ago when they were first published, and enjoyed both the strong characterisation and the piquancy of reading about a woman's career in the failed League of Nations of the interwar years.

Cold Light by Frank Moorhouse - Goodreads

This is the third in Frank Moorhouse's 'Edith' trilogy of novels. Edith is back in Australia following the demise of the League of Nations, her employer for many years. The novel commences in the 1950's and covers the historical events through to the election of the Whitlam Labor Government in 1972.

ISBN 9781742759111 I have returned to Cold Light, the third novel in the Edith Trilogy by Frank Moorhouse, time and time again. One of my reasons for going back to it is, as is often the case with writers, self-interest. I am currently writing a novel about Leonard Woolf and Woolf was, like Edith Campbell Berry, an odd fish.
